IN THE ALLEGHENIES.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Aug. 22.—This greatest watering place in the South is at the height of an unusually successful season and its capacity for 2,000 or more guests is fully taxed. People are here from all parts of the country, but principally from the North and the way they put on style and spend money would indicate that they have the latter to throw at the birds, but you can't always sometimes tell. There are some people foolish enough to stint themselves the rest of the year, after working like dogs, to show off here a month or less time, but I know that the majority of those who are paying big prices and stay here can really afford it. Nature has done a great deal for the place and man the rest, till it is the loveliest spot in my knowledge. The main hotel, which covers two acres of ground, is situated at the brow of a natural amphitheatre, made by hills, around which and higher up are handsomely cottages, named for the most part for the States. The spring, which is the strongest and most palatable sulphur I have ever drank, is situated some distance from the hotel down the same "hollow" and smells so strongly like decayed eggs as to be absolutely repulsive to the olfactory. It is said to be a panacea for some diseases, but those who come here to drink it are hopelessly in the minority. Neither the fare nor the accommodations are as first-class as the charges, which are $4 a day and up "meals and lodging extra."

It is hardly so bad as that, though you do have to pay for something nearly every time you turn around. Kentuckians and others fond of imbibing will doubtless shun the place when I tell them that I have been informed by those who have investigated, that the cheapest drink is 25c.

I have spent a week or two sitting around summer resorts doing nothing and it has been really as much punishment as pleasure. An old codger like myself, who doesn't know any thing but hard, exacting, treadmill work, soon tires of idleness, but I try to convince myself that I am having a balcony and vociferous time. It is an up hill job though and having set our faces homeward, we may be expected home at any time. Three weeks makes a longer vacation than I ever took before in my life and I could not have contented myself to take that much time off except that my family is with me and my physical condition was such as to require a surcease from labor.

Among the many pleasant people I met at the "Cold" was Rev. Dr. H. W. Battle, son of Gen. Battle, pastor of the First Baptist church at Petersburg, one of the most prominent divines of his church and well-known in Louisville, where he attended the Southern Theological Seminary. He is so this he hardly casts a shadow but would be considered a fat man alongside dear old Eld Logan Williams in his palmist days. What he lacks in corporeity, however, he makes up in good humor, wit and wisdom and is a most agreeable gentleman. Besides he is a dead game sport and a devotee of all outdoor exercises. He is considered one of the finest shots in Virginia, can spin on a bicycle like an expert and the other morning he and Dr. Hawthorne, of Richmond, another distinguished Baptist preacher, went out at 4 o'clock and returned about 9 with two foxes, or two more than Col. Hill has ever caught in the quarter of a century that we have seen him go out almost nightly to hunt them. As a fisherman too, the doctor is a glittering success. Tuesday he went to the Cow Pasture river, that the Indians used to call the "Wallawatoos," and brought back enough black bass and mountain trout to give the guests a delightful taste. It is refreshing to meet such a preacher, one whose life exemplifies the assurance that religion never was designed to make our pleasure less, who gets all the good out of life and doesn't go around with a "Hark from the tomb voice" and the air so fully described in a good old Methodist hymn: His thoughts on awful subjects rolled, damnation and the dead. The only Kentuckians there, besides my layout, were Mrs. Judge Q. Q. Quigley, of Paducah, and the fine looking Misses Anniebell and Jennie Science, of Versailles.

If I had the time and the paper had the space, I might tell you of many other people who added to the enjoyment of our stay at the "Cold." Most all of the guests were as big hearted old Steve Myers used to read at commencement, "distinguished and most distinguished." There were ex-governors, a brother of U. S. Senator Martin, Congressmen, Legislators and several noted preachers, while the relative of great men were as thick as leaves in Valtambrosa. One, Mr. Thomas J. Jefferson, claimed distant relationship with the great Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the declaration of independence, held one term as governor of Virginia, one as vice president of the United States and two as president, besides founding the University of Virginia, the most noted institution of the kind in the country. Mr. John Addison, of Richmond, is a lineal descendant of the poet of that name, and as fine a gentleman as the old State affords, with a handsome and excellent wife, who is a fit companion to such a nobleman by nature. Then the head cook held a similar position on the Battleship New York, and one of the chambermaids is said to have been an attaché of the White House. So you see we are dead in it. Of the many pretty girls, Miss Sallie Huntington, the daughter of a rich tobaccoist at Farmdale, is the most notable. She is a petite blonde with laughing eyes, dimpled cheeks, pearly teeth and a smile so winsome that it melts the marrow in the bones of men even as old and as much married as myself. Of course she is "engaged" but that doesn't keep the boys away. Indeed they swarm about her like bees and she has a bewitching smile for each. Miss Lula St. John, of Washington, was another of the beauties who would shine even in a Kentucky beauty show, while Misses Helen Camp, of Richmond, and Helen Kemper, of Albemarle, would attract attention anywhere, and there are others.

Sojourning at the "Cold" were two mighty good friends of Mr. Bedell Chancellor. Their names are T. P. and H. L. Wallace and they live in Fredericksburg. I found them to be exceedingly affable and well posted gentlemen on matters in general and on Mr. Chancellor in particular, of whom they related some amusing stories, and which we may tell unless he pays us big "hush" money. The Wallaces are democrats after my own heart. Mr. H. L. is over 64 and never scratched a ticket, and it is told of him that on one occasion, while he was asleep, some friends who thought to test his fidelity, tried to arouse him by saying: "Wake up, Mr. Wallace, the democrats have nominated the devil for governor." Without opening his eyes and apparently not awakening from his slumbers, he replied: "All right, tell 'em I'll be on the stump for him tomorrow."

In Richmond, I visited the noted Monumental church, built on the site of the theatre which was burned in 1803, together with 73 of those who were attending a performance, including the State's chief executive, Gov. Smith. This church rose from its ashes and was dedicated in 1805, and although its original appearance has been changed by renovations, it is still very unique and interesting. It is cylindrical in shape and does not much resemble the later day church architecture. In front of the entrance and under a dome is a marble urn containing the ashes of the unfortunates who lost their lives on the spot, with their names cut therein. A Richmond lady at Cold Sulphur told me of a pathetic legend of the great holocaust. A young lover who had had a dream, which revealed to him the awful catastrophe, insisted that his sweetheart should not attend the performance that night, but she attributed his objections to jealousy because she was going with another admirer and declined his request. Filled with forebodings, the anxious man paced his room and when he heard the fatal fire bells, rushed to the scene. Forcing his way through the struggling and panic stricken mass of humanity, he reached his loved one's side and gathering her in his arms succeeded in reaching a window. He was seen at it with his precious burden, attempting to force it open, but as he did so, the timbers gave way beneath him and he sank with her for whom he had risked so much into the seething, crackling flames to rise no more.

There are 2,500 or more Confederate soldiers buried in and around Richmond, a large number of them in Holywood, where a tall monument, built of roughly quarried granite, stands mute guard over them. It was constructed by private subscription and is in the shape of a huge pyramid, around which the ivy and Virginia creeper have climbed, till it almost presents a column of living green. At its base the dead from Gettysburg and many other battle fields are buried, each marked with a simple stone and many with nothing to show who the brave fellow was who gave his life for his country. Near the monument is one erected to Gen. Kemper and not far distant another marks the spot where the gallant Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, who was killed in battle at Yellow Tavern, near the city and who was a major general at the age of 31, sleeps after a short but brilliant career. Others who made imperishable fame on battle fields, also lie in this Fame's eternal camping ground, Where there silent tents are spread, And glory guards with solemn round The bivouac of the dead.

Buried away out here in the mountains, the news from the outside world comes exasperatingly slow. Newspapers from both the East and West do not get here till they are a day old and I have just learned at this hour, 11 A. M. Sunday, of the result of the Powers trial. Considering everything, the verdict is highly satisfactory, though death for the heinous crime, so fully proven against him and the other foul conspirators, would have been more in keeping with the justice of the case. It will suffice, however, and when he, Taylor and the rest of the ignoble crowd, who plotted and carried out the assassination of the greatest man Kentucky has produced in half a century, are safely within the gates of the institution so well presided over by gallant Eph Lillard, "government by gun," as Col. Welch puts it, will have received such a black eye, that it will be resorted to no more in this day and generation. There is now no ground upon which Gov. Mount can longer refuse to surrender the ignominious Taylor, and unless he takes delight in perjury himself, he will be forced to let him be returned to face a jury of his peers and get the punishment he so richly deserves and which has been too long delayed. With a conspiracy so overwhelmingly proven and the trial judge so eminently just and fair in his rulings, I take it that the court of appeals can not interfere, and that Powers' only chance for escaping the punishment meted out to him, is in executive clemency. Mr. Yerkes has failed to deny or affirm that he will pardon the convicts, although courteously requested to do so by this paper, but as he was nominated on a platform endorsing Taylor and "the other officers" and it is known that he sympathizes with Taylor at least, it is safe to assume that, if he is elected, his first act will be to sign pardons for the men convicted of the most diabolical crime ever concocted and carried out in a civilized country. It therefore behooves democrats of all shades of opinion to get together and see that Mr. Yerkes is given no chance to pardon the principals or accessories to the crime that makes the blood of every true man boil and long to see its perpetrators appropriately punished. What was believed before is now a proven fact and doubtless Thomas can no longer put up excuses for the conspirators convicted and accused. The conspiracy of leading republicans to get Goebel out of the way is no longer problematical and the democrat who dallies now is a dastard. The extra session of the Legislature will doubtless make the election fair acceptable to those who only desire fairness and remove the last prop from any democrat seeking an excuse to bolt and none will except those who are joined to their new idols and prefer to go to the bad. We can and must elect Beckham and restore civil government and the protection of life and property, with a guarantee that the humblest man seek his rights under the constitution without being put in danger of a bullet or an assassin. Let us remember Goebel and stamp under the rooster.

I haven't been at the "White" long enough to get all the bearings of the changes that have been wrought since I was here before, or to find out who is here, and I suspect I will have to leave before I do. Making such investigations at $12 to $15 a day is rather a costly performance, especially for a man who has to follow the Biblical injunction to earn his living by the sweat of his brow, and I shall have to forego it or be compelled to walk home. My readers, if happily, I have any left, will rejoice to know that this closes my epistolary efforts for the present. If I have succeeded in either amusing, interesting or instructing even a single one of the 15,000 readers that the paper had before I began this onslaught, I am more than repaid. God be with you till we meet again. W. P. W.

EX-GOV. BUTTWEILL, of Massachusetts, says that he helped to create the republican party and will now do all in his power to destroy it. It is to be hoped that many years of strength may be added to the old man's life that he may succeed in the herculean task of destroying this curse which he helped to bring on his country.

LAWYER CAMPBELL, like old Ben Butler, has been accused by his adversaries of everything except being a fool. If what they say of him is true, it is only another proof of the old adage that it takes a scoundrel to catch a scoundrel.

It is now clear why the various Brown officers refused to recognize the democratic officials by reporting to the auditor and paying to the treasurer. The funds of the State held by them were needed to run their private affairs.

GEN. GORDON, in a card, gracefully repudiates those who object to joint reunions of the blue and gray and to his attending the G. A. R. meeting in Chicago. The war has been over now to 40 years, so let us have peace.

MCKINLEY will have no body-guards to protect him from anarchists at the G. A. R. meeting in Chicago. The dose administered to these vermin in that city a few years back has had a very quieting effect on them.

THE assassination organs are raging and imagining vain things over the conviction of Caleb Powers. Nothing short of turning over to Goebel's murderer the $100,000 reward fund will ever satisfy them.

PAUL DUNBAR, the Negro poet, was snatched and robbed in a New York saloon. Whether it was his poetry or wealth that caused the assault, the report fails to say, but it must have been the poetry.

BRYAN is now the nominee of the democratic, populist and silver parties. The republicans had as well fall in and make it unanimous and save the mortification of a Waterloo in November.

RECENT developments clearly show that if the republicans had remained in charge another term, the State would have been compelled to take the benefit of the bankrupt law.

MCKINLEY's letter of acceptance will contain 16,000 words. He is evidently a man of words, if not of deeds.

THE republicans are making merry because Gov. Beckham declines to meet Mr. Yerkes in joint debate on the ground that he can't spare the time from the duties which the people have elected him and pay him to perform. In the opinion of the republicans the only duty required of a public official is to draw his salary and leave the performance of his duties to others, just like Mr. Yerkes, who is paid a small fortune to run the office of collector, is doing. We can assure the mirth-makers that the refusal is not actuated by any fear of Mr. Yerkes, for Gov. Beckham pursued the same course when a candidate for the nomination, and he knows and everybody else knows, that if he should meet Mr. Yerkes, he would only have to ask him a few questions to cause him to take to the woods.

THE New York Times, in the makeup of a recent issue, inadvertently played a joke on itself. An article primarily intended to condemn the conviction of Powers, but digressing to charge Kentuckians with every crime in the catalogue and hold them up as objects of derision, is followed by a long and lame one attempting to disprove the charge that New York stands at the head of the list in the number of murders. The old fight of the beam on the mote will never cease.

THE constant explosion of shells over his head by the press has caused Teddy Roosevelt to rush into print with an explanation of what he said about democrats in his St. Paul speech, but the explanation is worse than the original offense. Our enemy, Teddy, has written several books and, as he has now reached the newspaper card stage, we will soon have him in a hotter box than San Juan hill.

It was altogether unnecessary for Caleb Powers to notify the public in a card that he was disgusted with everything pertaining to the trial in which he was convicted. The public has for a long time been impressed with the fact, by painful object lessons and otherwise, that Caleb has a profound contempt for everything pertaining to law and its enforcement.

ONE of the grounds urged by Youtsey for a continuance of his case was the absence of witnesses W. S. Taylor and Charles Fieley. If it is continued until the presence of these witnesses is obtained by ordinary court process, that little affair of Youtsey's before the Georgetown court will have to be wound up by his executor.

THERE ought to be a stop put to card writing to the public by Convict Powers. His effort to pose as a martyr at the expense of the courts of justice, is disgusting to those who read the testimony and know how guilty he was proven.

WHEN it comes to canny Scotchmen, Bryan will have in Andrew Carnegie a lieutenant who is the superior in every particular of McKimley's commander-in-chief, Mark Hanna.

THE republicans, anxious to divert the attack from the weakest spot in their armor, are greatly annoyed because Bryan is discussing imperialism instead of free silver.

POLITICAL.

Hon. G. G. Gilbert opened his campaign in a splendid speech at Lawrenceburg.

T. B. Demaree was beaten for State chairman of the prohibition party by Dr. Smith, of Henderson.

Gov. Beckham will formally open his campaign with a speech at Henderson on Sept. 3. Ex-Gov. McCreary will be heard at the same time.

W. H. Sweeney told the Courier Journal that the same speakers will stump the State for Yerkes this year that spoke for Brown and Taylor last. The democratic campaign in Missouri was opened at Sedalia Tuesday with speeches by Adlai E. Stevenson and A. M. Dockery. The crowd was the largest ever seen at Sedalia.

Hon. John D. White, who as an independent republican has made it warm for republican nominees in the 14th district, was nominated by acclamation for governor by the prohibitionists. They wanted him to swear allegiance to the party for good and all, but the crested jayhawker would only promise four years of party service.
